

The United States Pilots Association objects to the NPRM on national air tour safety standards on the basis that nine of the eleven cited examples are already Part 135 certified, and there is no reasonable need to handicap Part 91 operations. Among other things, this NPRM would put many small air tour operators out of business needlessly.